COMPREHENSIVE RULES

All games are played under the laws of cricket with the following exceptions:

- a) Matches are played between 2 teams of 8 players and consist of seven six-ball overs bowled by each side from one end of the wicket. With the exception of the wicketkeeper each member of the fielding side bowls one over. The wicketkeeper cannot be changed unless he is injured. The substitute wicketkeeper (who is not allowed to bowl) must complete the innings.
- b) The following rules relate to the calling of no balls and wides:
 - i) In the event of a wide or no ball, 2 runs are added to the batting teams score. The ball is then re-bowled.
 - ii) All overs have a maximum of 8 balls (including wides and no balls) except for the last over of an innings which must have 6 legal deliveries.
 - iii) A ball out of the reach of the batter in their normal batting stance shall be called a wide. No further runs can be scored if a wide is called.
 - iv) Any ball delivered by the bowler reaching the batter above shoulder height in their normal batting stance or above the waist on the full or landing off the pitch shall be called a no ball. If the batter manages to hit a no ball they score 2 runs plus whatever is scored off the bat.

- v) A ball may bounce twice before reaching the batter. A ball that bounces more than 2 times or rolls along the ground and is impossible for the batter to hit shall be called a no ball.

 - c) No fielder in front of the wicket is allowed to be closer than 10m from the bat. Fielders behind the wicket are to be at least 5m to the side of the wicket-keeper unless in the 'slips' (no backstop allowed).
 - d) A batter must retire on passing a personal score of 20. Retired batters may return in the order in which they retired if one of the last pair of batters is dismissed before the completion of 7 overs.
 - e) If 7 wickets fall before the 7 overs are completed, the last remaining batter is the only one who can score runs and must return to the striker's end each time he scores 1, 3 or 5. If either of the last 2 batters are out, the innings will be closed.
 - f) Players who have bowled their over may be replaced by substitute fielders however the wicketkeeper cannot be changed.
